12.01.2021 | GlobeNewswire

TORONTO, Jan. 12, 2021 - Jourdan Resources Inc. (TSX-V: JOR) (Jourdan; or the Company) is pleased to announce that it is resuming exploration at its lithium project north of Val d'Or, Quebec. The initial activities will comprise field work on the property and proceeding with analytical testing of the bulk sample taken in 2018.

We are delighted to resume activities on our lithium project north of Val d'Or; says Rene Bharti, CEO of Jourdan. We feel that there is sufficient evidence to justify a renewed work program on the Baillarg? property as well as on Vall?e. Furthermore, we have initiated the analysis of the bulk sample for lithium grade estimation, assessing its economic viability.

Given the rise in lithium prices, we believe Jourdan is strategically placed to become a prominent lithium player in a well-known lithium-rich jurisdiction, in a mining friendly environment. Canada is emerging as a leader in green and sustainable energy management. We anticipate that the groundswell in the green movement will allow us a path forward to develop our lithium projects as we look to capitalize on the ever-growing electric car battery business.

Dr. Andreas Rompel, Chairman of Jourdan states, The recent surge in the price of lithium on the world market has encouraged us to resume exploration activities on our lithium project north of Val d'Or. We are looking forward to further exploration on our properties for more lithium-bearing pegmatites.

Our work program, consisting of soil sampling and geological mapping, in addition to the bulk sample that is being sent for analysis, is expected to further enhance our understanding of our Baillarg? & Vall?e lithium properties.
